Introduction:

This Directory is intended to provide information on how to gain access and utilize the special collections that are currently housed in the libraries in some of the major zoos of the world. Since these collections contain many interesting and unique materials, it may be of use to researchers, zoo keepers, authors, educators, etc. to know that they exist and who to contact for access.

Each record for a zoo library contained in the Directory contains the following types of information: institutional name and address, contact information, website addresses, size and types of materials in the collection, types of patrons accommodated, services, and special notes about the library and the collections.

There are a few changes from the original document that have been made for this web-based version. Some additional access points have been added to some of the records, to include World Wide Web site and email addresses. The bibliography on the role of zoo librarians that appears in the original document is not included here.

The information was compiled Jill Gordon and was published through the American Zoo and Aquarium Association's Librarians Special Interest Group (AZA/LSIG).<sup>1</sup> The Directory has been made available to you via the AWIC web site with the permission of Jill Gordon, Compiler and Editor of the 9th edition.

If the reader would like to recommend additions of library resources that are not included in this document, please contact Jill Gordon and/or the Animal Welfare Information Center at <http://www.nal.usda.gov/awic/contact.php>.

1. AZA/LSIG consists of zoo and aquarium librarians and other responsible for the institution's library. It currently has 90 members from 4 continents. Members of the group communicate with each other regularly via a listserv listserv@zivm.si.edu. For more information on subscribing to the listserv, individuals may contact Alvin Hutchison at the National Zoological Park Library at 202 673 4771 or hutchinsona@sil.si.edu.
